

The Conservation Education Institute (CEI) is an environmental education project of the Georgia-Alabama Land Trust.

The CEI provides environmental, heritage, and conservation education to land owners and the general public, including programs and events for adults, children, families, students, teachers and educators.

This internship is an excellent opportunity to train and work at one of the largest accredited land trusts in the nation as it implements a new southeastern conservation environmental education initiative. This internship is especially appropriate for students majoring in Environmental Studies, Education, Biology, Forestry, History, Arts, or any related field.

The intern selected for this position will assist with the development, implementation, and assessment of immersion-based programs, outdoor adventure workshops, and other fun events that connect people to nature. The intern will have diverse opportunities to work in land protection, easement monitoring, land management practices and conservation field surveys.
